THE RUSH

The El Morro Shootout might be the most iconic start to a billfish tournament in all of the world. Minutes before the flare, participating anglers and captains anxiously await as heart rates rise and adrenaline rushes. It's not because of the blue marlin, but rather the thousands of horsepower about to rip through the water as sport-fishers race to the front of the fleet. One participant described the scene as chaos, but it's more than that: The experience is a beautifully choreographed sight to behold, both on the water and from high above.
